

GLEASON TO BE RETURNED TO FLEMING THEN TO FRANKFORT

Man Arrested in Dayton, Ky., By Prohibition Officers, Escaped Fleming Jail While Awaiting High Court's Decision.

Edward Gleason, 64 years old, who was arrested at his home in Dayton, Ky., last Friday evening by Federal Prohibition Agents and who confessed that he was wanted in Fleming county for murder, will be turned over to the Fleming county authorities and taken to Frankfort, to begin a sentence of twenty-one years in the state penitentiary.

Gleason was convicted of manslaughter in the Fleming Circuit Court before Judge C. D. Newell and a jury about ten years ago and sentenced to serve twenty-one years in the state penitentiary for his crime. While in jail awaiting the decision of the Kentucky Court of Appeals on an appeal taken by his attorneys, Gleason escaped jail and had never been heard from until located last week in Dayton. Gleason was taken in Dayton Friday evening on a charge of moonshining and a still was discovered on his property operated by him but the civil court has prior claim upon him as he was under sentence of the court and escaped while under a stay of execution granted by Judge Newell pending the Court of Appeals' decision. The higher court sustained the Fleming court and he must serve his sentence under the manslaughter charge.

STUNT NIGHT AT EDGEFIELD A BIG SUCCESS

Members of Country Club Have Great Time Saturday Evening Enjoying "Stunt" Feature on Program.

The "stunt" night at Edgefield Country Club Saturday night was a great success. It was opened by music by the Glascocks. Mr. Arthur Glascock on the piano, assisted by Miss Kitty Glascock on the violin and Miss Nancy Glascock on the saxophone. Their music was sweet and delighted the members of the club.

Next came Mrs. Alfred Peed with two beautiful songs assisted on piano by Miss Florence Barbour. Mrs. Peed never sang better.

Next came Miss Virginia Watkins with her dances. To have seen her was a rare treat and she looked like a fairy within our midst, as sweet in looks as nature can produce.

Next came Mrs. Duane Rogers whose readings were delightful and enjoyed by all. They were equal to any professional.

Then came the "surprise" and was true to the word a great surprise. Prof. Andrew Veenie came forth with his violin and played the good old-fashioned tunes of forty years ago, and some in our midst dancing to this music, masked, was before our eyes a "surprise." "Who are they?" you could hear on every side. It seemed that Mrs. Sanahan in "clown" attire, they guessed, but "who, or who, was the Ballad Girl?" Fun yet by the mile. Finally the mask was taken off and it was J. W. Elgin.

After this they all were invited out and then we all enjoyed a watermelon treat. It was certainly a good treat for all present.

Miss Elizabeth Holton spent Sunday with her brother, Mr. Henry Holton, and family of Trinity, Ky.

UNION SERVICES WELL ATTENDED.

The union open-air services held on the court house lawn Sunday evening were well attended. Rev. O. C. Seever's pastor of the First M. E. Church, South delivered a very interesting address which was well received by the audience. These services will be continued by the down-town churches throughout the vacation months.

MONEY BOX IN CHURCH IS ROBBED.

It was discovered Sunday that a box in the local Christian church in which free will offerings for the building fund of that church were dropped, had been robbed. The box had been broken open with a hammer of some sort and the cash in the box is not known.

CARDINALS BREAK EVEN IN THE SERIES WITH CYNTHIANA

Locals Win One and Lose One Remaining in a Tie With Harrison Countians for Second Honors in the League.

The best the Cardinals could get in their two game series against Cynthiana was an even break, winning Sunday's game 4 to 2, but losing Saturday's by the tune of 6 to 2, both teams remaining in a tie for second place and with every club in the same position that they occupied before the start of the week-end series, for every team that won Saturday lost on Sunday.

Saturday's game was the first the Cynthiana aggregation has won over the Cards this year and was due largely to the efforts of Long, whose work against the locals on the mound was very effective, while Reese, a newcomer with the Cards, lasted but a few rounds, and had Bosken who relieved him started the game it might have been a different tale. However Saturday's game was a poor exhibition with the only gratifying feature the return of Manager Bosken to the hill with the same old stuff. With a pitching staff of Miner, Shaw, Bosken and Reese, the locals are conceded to be the strongest in the league in that department.

In a small way Miner repeated his performance of last Wednesday only this time against a much stronger club when he took in Cynthiana 4 to 2 Sunday, striking out 8 and allowing 7 bingles with the seventh inning the only frame the visitors could collect more than one hit thereby scoring a run, following with another score in the eighth on a single hit aided by two errors and a wild pitch.

Maysville's runs all came in the early innings before Monhollen relieved Padgett in the fourth. Class' hot liner went through Stubbs in left for a home run the first innings. The Cards crossed again in the second. Fortner was safe on Reese's error and came home on Connolly's long single to right. The fourth saw the end of Padgett when Margerum and Harding led off with singles, Margerum going to third. On a wild pitch Hap scored and Harding arrived at third. Burman rolled to Rorer who threw wild to the plate and Harding counted. Monhollen got his next three batters.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR LAD WHO SLEW FATHER

Officials Place Little Credence in the Mother's Theory That Boy Slew Himself in Fit of Remorse.

While funeral services for Frank Libermann, farmer, of near Batavia, Ohio, were being conducted at Batavia Sunday Sheriff John Rapp, of Clermont County and Cincinnati police were continuing their search for his son, Gus Libermann, 17 years old, who is being sought on a charge of having shot his father during a quarrel at their home.

The boy was trailed to Cincinnati, but no trace of him has been found since he left a traction car at the Carroll street crossing on his arrival in the city.

The boy's mother believes that he became despondent and ended his life after he arrived in Cincinnati. The authorities, however, are not inclined to accept this theory, and are hopeful of locating him and ascertaining the nature of the quarrel which led to the fatal shooting.

"Aren't you going to the German-town Fair this week?" one lady asked another today. "Oh, my, yes, indeed! I am going especially to see that world-beater Delco-Light Electric Washing Machine on display at the booth of C. L. Mains & Co., and you must go with me."

"OLD RELIABLE" TO OPEN 78th ANNUAL FAIR WEDNESDAY

Everything in Readiness for the Biggest Fair in This Section of the Country—Many New Added Features This Year.

Don't forget that the "Old Reliable" begins Wednesday the 23rd and continues throughout the week including Thursday and Friday nights. We wish to call particular attention to our programs for Wednesday and Thursday. We sincerely hope that our friends will avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing the splendid displays of dairy and beef cattle, hogs, sheep and mules to be shown on those days. We are giving $200.00 on one pig class and $140 on another and with our very liberal premiums throughout all the hog classes, we have developed a wonderful hog show. We have found it necessary to double our facilities for handling the hogs and sheep.

The Shorthorn sale Thursday afternoon will offer a splendid opportunity to the cattle breeders who attend the Fair to improve their herds. Our stables are already about filled with saddle and harness horses, which assures us well filled rings in these classes.

The night fair is our most novel feature and we have arranged programs for each night that are sure to please, since they embrace some of our very best rings.

The Radio station that we have installed is one of the most powerful to be had. We have arranged to give free open air concerts each day and night.

Attend the public sale of the James Thompson farms Tuesday afternoon.

WILD RUMORS AFLOAT ON WINCHESTER STREETS

Officials Deny Wild Street Reports of Renaker Investigation But Say Dis-interment Disclosed Information.

Wild rumors were afloat in Winchester, Ky., Monday following disinterment of the body of Leon Renaker, "turkey king," who was slain in his Winchester home July 25.

Police, city and county authorities and detectives spent several hours examining the body. Electric hand lamps and a bonfire aided them in their task. It was reported Renaker's eyeballs were removed so the retinas might be photographed in the hope they would show a picture of the murderer, retained as the eyes become fixed in death.

It also was reported certain suspects were to be shown the body.

Both of these reports are without foundation, authorities said Monday. They said the body was inspected to determine whether the fatal wound had been inflicted by a blow from a pistol.

The disinterment revealed some "interesting information," they said. They refused to disclose its nature.

MANY HEAR PROGRAM OF NEW ONES BY BAND.

There was a very large crowd in Market street Sunday evening to hear the concert by the Kentucky Cardinal Band and the band never played better although their entire program was of new numbers. The first playing of "Kentucky Cardinal" march, Mr. Barnard's new march dedicated to Governor Edwin P. Morrow, and written especially for the Kentucky State Fair, was pleasing and made a great hit with the public. It is predicted that it will have a great reception throughout the country by the better bands of musicians.

TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS DAMAGES ASKED IN SUIT

Husband Who Was Sued Last Week For Divorce Asks Big Damages From Wife's Parents Charging Alienation of Affections.

Horace F. Crawford, young Mason county man, who was made the defendant in a divorce action brought in the Circuit Court last week by his wife, Mamie Johnson Crawford, filed suit, through Attorney M. J. Hennessey, of Augusta, in the Circuit Court here Monday afternoon against J. T. Johnson and Vina Johnson, parents of his wife, asking judgment against them in the sum of twenty thousand dollars.

The plaintiff states in his petition that he and Mamie Johnson Crawford, the daughter of the defendants, were married in 1917, and that they lived happily together as man and wife until August 11, 1921, when the defendants took his wife to their home claiming that she was ill and that she has since remained with the defendants in their home.

He charges in his petition that before and since the defendants have had his wife in their home and in their charge, they conceiving and harboring an intense dislike for him, have maliciously prejudiced the mind of Mamie Crawford against him and have sought to alienate her affections from him.

His prayer is for judgment against the defendants in the sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) and for cost in the action.

AUTO PLUNGES OVER RIVER BANK

Mr. Leo Satterly, of Maysick, cranked his automobile which was parked in Front street Sunday afternoon and the machine, which was in gear, caused him considerable trouble. Before Mr. Satterly could get in control of the machine, it dashed across the C. & O. tracks and over the river bank. The accident was near the foot of Sutton street. The machine was considerably damaged and it was quite fortunate that Mr. Satterly was not in the machine.

Mr. Ernest L. Zeigler who has been a patient at the General Hospital, Cincinnati, has recovered sufficiently to be able to be removed to the residence of his brother, Mr. Jerome Zeigler.

THE LABOR TRUST.

The end of the nineteenth century found the so-called "interests" largely in control of the government. The "invisible government" before Roosevelt's time was curbed by the Interstate Commerce and Anti-Trust acts. Until Wilson's time the captains of industry who made the United States a world power were recognized as entitled by their ability to be consulted, but through the Interstate Commerce and Anti-Trust statutes they were restricted so that they must not monopolize or restrain trade. They were great builders. Freight and passenger rates were low. Efficiency was at a premium. Strikes were local not national.

Then came the Wilson Regime and its "New Freedom." No longer were great builders admired. No more was achievement acknowledged. Never had Morgan, Rockefeller or Hill exerted the power over legislation that Untermyer, Brandies and Gompers exercised during Wilson's eight years.

At the end of Wilson's reign, for it was a reign with dictatorial powers granted during the war, a labor oligarchy was established. A monopolistic control of this country. "Collective bargaining" has become "monopolistic bargaining." The great labor unions had immunity not granted any other combinations. The Attorney-General had an appropriation to curb trusts but it must not be used to curb labor trusts.

Now we are in the midst of the contest to decide whether these great labor monopolies shall control the United States. The "Labor Trust" differs from the "Money Trust" markedly. Murder, massacre, insurrection, blowing up of tipples, crippling of engines are recognized as usually accompanying restraint of trade by the "Labor Trust." The "Money Trust" so-called has been dethroned. The "Labor Trust" must be dethroned. Neither a "Money Trust" nor a "Labor Trust" can be permitted to stop industry and cause starvation. Violence must cease. The right to work must not be destroyed by sabotage or Herrin massacres.

If those now in political power cannot or will not maintain law and order, others will be chosen in their stead. It is no time for compromise or surrender.

The election in Massachusetts in 1919 shows that when the issue is joined, "law and order" will win. It is popular as well as right to preserve the rights of the people against dictation, either by capital or by labor.—Boston News Bureau.

DEFINING SENIORITY RIGHTS.

President B. M. Jewell of the railway employees officially defines seniority rights as, first, the right of the senior employee to be the last to be laid off in reduction of forces, and second, the right of senior employees to have the first preference in the selection for vacancies in preferable jobs. He follows his definition with this statement:

"The railway employees, as a group, are steady workers. They will average between ten and twenty-five years in continuous service. With the increasing certainty of permanent employment the longer they remain in the service, they are encouraged to buy homes and to establish themselves in community activities with assurance of continuous livelihood. To deprive the men of these rights would operate so that in the event of reducing forces the railroads would be permitted to discharge the senior employees and to retain men engaged for only a short time in transportation service."

In all this there is nothing that has the remotest application to the underlying principles involved in the refusal of the railroads to restore rights which have been voluntarily forfeited by continued absence from the post of duty and continued efforts to prevent the operation of the railroads, so far as the shopmen can effect this end.

While Mr. Jewell's definition of seniority rights and their application under normal conditions may not be universally admitted in all details, nevertheless, for all practical purposes, it may be accepted without argument. But he advances no conceivable reason why the roads should consent to hold open voluntarily abandoned jobs, while those who held them are actively resisting even the temporary filling of their places. He gives no reasons whatever why the roads should discharge men who have given faithful service during the strike. He gives no reason why men, after having thrown down their tools, should be taken back with an unimpaired status of seniority, and others, who served the public at a critical time, are ousted from the places they have doubly earned.

The situation as Mr. Jewell pictures it is very far from being the situation which actually exists. One would gather from his statement that the roads are themselves trying to oust faithful employees, home-builders, noted for their continuity of service, and to give their places to new men. Nobody will be deceived by any such ex parte distortion of the facts.—Kansas City Journal.

SENIORITY

Whatever may be the nature and intent of the seniority rule, the custom as to reinstatement of individuals who return to the service after an interval cannot fairly be applied to a body of men who "suspend work" in concert under the new circumstances created by the establishment of the labor board. These men have brought about the very evil which the board is designed to prevent. They cannot expect to regain the preferred position over new employees which they would have enjoyed if they had continued work.

The statement that the strikers have not by their actions denied their obligation to the people to maintain service is contradicted in the same sentence by assertion of the same right as is enjoyed by men in other occupations to demand "the price asked." The very nature of transportation service requires that it be continuous, and for that reason the law substitutes the authority of the labor board for that of the strike budgeon. It is not true that "the people demand that service without regard to the conditions under which it is obtained." Through their officers they have taken the settlement of those conditions out of the hands of both employers and employees, and have taken all precaution that the conditions laid down shall be just. They are just to the point of generosity, for the wages awarded are higher than those paid to men in the same occupations elsewhere than on railroads, higher also than the range of prices demands.—Oregonian.

UNCLE TED'S BED-TIME STORIES.

"I just don't understand it, that's all," said Ruth.

"Well, I don't understand much myself but I know enough from what Uncle Ted has told us that Freddie is ALL wrong. It is silly to say that if we keep other countries from sending all the goods they want into our country to sell that we can't sell anything to them." Jack was more than emphatic with his ideas about the tariff.

"The heat doesn't seem to worry you kiddies much when it comes to an argument," said Uncle Ted as he came into the room wiping the perspiration from his face. "You know it is MUCH cooler in your room and there is a big fan there too, so what do you say if we wind our way toward the land of nod?"

"Oh, Gee! Uncle Ted," said Jack. "we don't want to go to bed yet. It's too hot to go to bed."

"What is harder for you kiddies than going to bed? I'll tell you. If you will get undressed you can come down here for a half hour and I'll tell you something that will help both of you when Freddie asks you again about selling goods to other countries."

It was no sooner said than done and Uncle Ted had no more than seated himself as comfortably as possible when the kiddies were ready for their story.

"You see, children, the Republican party has always stood for what is known as a protective tariff to protect American workmen and American products against the sale of foreign goods in this country at lower prices and of inferior quality in many cases. Now, of course, with a new tariff law in sight those opposed to a protective tariff are spreading all kinds of wild stories. They say that if we don't buy from other countries we can't sell to them. That is not true because anybody can write to the Department of Commerce at Washington, as I have done, and they will find that in 44 of the 48 years since 1874 we have sold more goods abroad than we have purchased. It is foolish for anyone to argue that other countries are buying from us simply because we have bought from them. There is no more sentiment in international business than in national business, not as much, if we admit sentiment enters into national business. We don't buy oranges from California simply because we sell them automobiles. We buy California oranges because we want them and like them and they buy our automobiles because they are good cars. These free trade people try to paint an awful picture of what will happen to our trade if we put a protective tariff into effect, that other countries will stop buying our goods, etc. There is no truth in this argument."

"Here are some figures for argument's sake. During the year 1912 and 1913 the Payne-Aldrich protective tariff bill was in effect, but there was no such trouble as free traders would have us believe. In 1912 Canada bought goods from us amounting to $329,257,194 while our purchases from here amounted to only $108,813,368. That was quite a difference but in 1913 the difference was even greater the amount of goods sold to us by Canada totaling only $120,571,180 while her purchases of American goods amounted to $416,449,457."

"Everywhere you look there is absolutely no foundation to the argument that an American protective tariff will destroy our foreign trade. All the figures I have been able to run down, taken from the years when we had the protective tariff show that our export trade was greater than our import trade."

"Going back to the year 1912 we find that our foreign business amounted to a total of $1,341,732,789 while Europe's total business with us amounted to only $819,585,326."

"Many of those who are doing their best to defeat a protective tariff are using Germany as one of their main arguments. Germany make a fine target for them because they love to tell us how Germany is stepping ahead by leaps and bounds and how she will walk away with everything. In using the German argument they forget that they are proving nothing so far as tariff is concerned. What they are doing is to make a very unpleasant reflection on American business and the men behind American business. The actual figures of business with Germany during the two years of 1912, 1913, when Germany was in her prime and long before the Great War even started, are the best proof against the German argument. During those two years we bought from Germany goods totaling $360,343,451."

"Gee, that's a lot of money to send there," said Ruth.

"Yes, Ruth, but we sold goods to Germany during this same twenty-four months totaling $638,643,233 or almost twice as much! Odes that look like a protective tariff kills our foreign trade? Hardly! And not only that but

1 Out of Every 100 People In All The World Carried by The L & N in 1921

Estimating the world's population at something over one billion souls, the astonishing figures given below show that during the year of 1921 the Louisville & Nashville Railroad transported one out of every one hundred people in the world—an average distance of forty eight and eight-tenths miles.

Think what this means to the health, the wealth and the happiness of L. & N. served territory—14,054,496 passengers employed its services as a carrier—a number greater than the entire population of America's eight largest cities—or of the entire population of the states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia.

Under normal conditions, or times of disturbing operating problems, the people of the South have come to appreciate the fact that they can depend on the

by Lucy Jeannie Price

New York. — Our nerves are getting sensitive here in Manhattan after crimes, explosions and various other little irritants. So the other day, an excited woman reported the collapse of a building and got out the fire truck and an ambulance. When they arrived, they learned that the building was still standing and apparently quite undisturbed by the reports of its going on. Some repair work was being done on the roof, and the woman had seen a few bricks fall down.

We get some queer shiploads in New York Harbor every once in a while. The countries of the world send us their riches, and if a particular land's riches are wild animals, why, they send those. One hundred thousand dollars worth of them came into port the other day — tigers, monkeys, lions, snakes, and on down to canaries. Some of them went to the Bronx zoo and some to an animal farm down on Long Island.

It would seem that Mr. Walter Bauer, President of the Pyrene Manufacturing Company, would have to apply his well known extinguisher to his letters before sending them out.

But for the sake of our own enjoyment we hope he will do that, if necessary, rather than modify them. At this time of year, with the air full of humidity and politics, we get some refreshment from the spurring up of a man who doesn't mind defying whatever powers there be in words which none may misunderstand. Corporation Counsel O'Brien wrote Mr. Bauer that the matter of pyrene and the subways was "too important to be settled in private meetings or conferences in your offices." That gave Mr. Bauer the opening of his life. "All right," he replied, in effect, "Come on into the subway and we'll settle it there." He proposed that he and the Mayor and Mrs. O'Brien take an extinguisher into the subway and try it out. "We will meet all expenses of the demonstration and let the use of pyrene stand or fall as the result of the test. Make it as exacting as you can. We will supply the persons necessary to carry it out." Mr. Bauer wrote the Mayor to the same effect, assuring him that there would be no personal danger to His Honor in witnessing the demonstration.

Bernard Shaw has definite ideas as to the breadth of a translator's duties and powers. Lawrence Langer, a director of the Theater Guild, who has just arrived home from Europe, has brought with him for production by the Guild, "Gitta's Atonement," among other plays. It is "translated" by Shaw from the German of Trebitsch, but Langer explains that the play is 75 per cent. Shaw and 25, Trebitsch. "This is the way Shaw explained it," he says, "Trebitsch has spent his life turning my plays from English into German. It seemed high time that I reciprocated. The first difficulty was that I didn't understand German—but I overcame that. Then I found that the play, when translated, wouldn't do at all for the British public. It was a serious situation, until I decided that a translator must adopt as seems best. So I made 'Gitta's Atonement,' originally a tragedy, into a comedy." Which certainly sounds like Shaw.

New York is going to have a Citizens Committee, which will try to see if something can't be done to prevent the recurrence of innocent men being locked up and held for trial for weeks and then discharged without any recompense for the trouble and the loss which came to them undeserved. The case of John S. Porfiro, former taxi driver, and his imprisonment for sixty days before the discovery of his innocence, has spurred a group of prominent lawyers to action on the whole situation. Porfiro looked for work unsuccessfully, for four months after his release.

In the midst of ever-changing New York, one district remains undisturbed by the shifts that come with time. In 1676, the city tanneries were congregated around John and Ann streets, and the blocks included in the immediate district were called "Shomekar's Land." In the next twenty years, it moved as far up as Beekman street, and there, 226 years later, it now remains. The tanneries, themselves, and their unpleasant odors have moved from that heart of the city, but the leather trade district is still right there. It gives one a feeling of comfortable permanence to come across something of that sort occasionally.

TWO PLACES TO GO.

Every American, at least, should make as soon after maturity as possible, for his benefit as a citizen and as an individual, two pilgrimages—one to Washington's home at Mount Vernon, Virginia, and the other to the Grand Canyon of Arizona, says the American Forestry Magazine. Sentimental journeys they must be; the first to the place most closely associated with our nation's greatest hero; the second to nature's greatest wonder.

WESTERN KENTUCKY FARMERS SHOW INTEREST IN POULTRY.

Lexington, Ky. — Recent poultry culling demonstrations conducted in Grayson, Hart and Muhlenberg counties by farmers' organizations, the extension division of the College of Agriculture and county agricultural agents brought out many indications that farmers in Central-Western Kentucky are keenly interested in poultry raising. Demonstrations, which were designed to show farmers and poultry raisers how to distinguish between the laying and loafing hens in their flocks, also served to bring out many points on housing, feeding and the control of poultry diseases for the benefit of those who attended.

The interest was especially marked in Grayson county where farmers received a total of more than one million dollars in 1921 from the sale of poultry products, according to produce men. Five hundred fifty persons attending nine demonstrations and one night meeting held in this county, a total of 150 persons gathered at the night meeting where important poultry problems were discussed. Eight similar demonstrations were held in Hart county and four in Muhlenberg.

The schedule of nine demonstrations in Grayson took in the farms of W. I. Dehaven, Jim Larkin and A. L. Moore, near Lettichfield; P. K. Tabb, near Caneyville; R. E. Roby, near Church; John Hackett, near Clarkson; J. O. Washburn, near Caneyville; John Shain, near Spring Lick; and Jess C. Lee, near Lettichfield. In Hart county the demonstrations were held on the farms of Dr. R. D. Peterson, William Slinker, C. C. Winston, J. B. Lester and O. M. Moss, all near Munfordville; J. T. Gerald, near Cub Run; L. B. Bowling, near Canmer and J. T. Bryant, near Hardyville. The four Muhlenberg county demonstrations were held on the farm of D. Stewart, and W. W. Warren, near Greenville; V. B. Southard, near Luzerne, and J. B. Winn, near Dunmore.

The entire flock in each of these farms was culled by H. R. Jackson, poultry extension specialist from the College of Agriculture, in order to show farmers the method of distinguishing between the laying and non-laying hens in their flocks. Many questions as to the control of poultry diseases and the best methods of increasing egg production by feeding also were answered for the benefit of those who attended the demonstrations. A total of 1,080 hens were handled in the demonstrations, 419, or more than 38 per cent. of these, being culled out because they showed the characteristic signs of being poor producers that had stopped laying.

35 CARE OF FLIM ESPREAD ON GRAYSON COUNTY SOILS

Lexington, Ky. — Liberty use of limestone is playing the leading role in a soil improvement movement which Grayson county farmers are carrying on in cooperation with County Agent R. W. Searce and the College of Agriculture extension division. During the last three months, approximately 35 carloads of the material have been used on farms in the county while the steady use of it is expected to be continued for some time. The fact that Mr. Searce, who is directing the work, has been in the county only about three months is taken as an indication of the keen interest which the farmers in that section are showing in this method of increasing the crop yields from their land.

Most of the soil types found in the county belong to the coal measures and Chester formations although a few outcroppings of St. Louis limestone are present. Many of the soils are extremely sour and need limestone more than anything else before they can produce clover and other legumes. County Agent Searce is recommending an application of two tons of limestone and 800 pounds of acid phosphate an acre. The fertilizer and limestone in most cases will be used on wheat where clover is to be seeded in the spring. Excellent results are almost sure to follow this method of soil treatment, specialists say.

In order that the use of limestone would not have to be limited, farmers who were interested in the plan for soil improvement contracted for the entire summer output of a quarry in a neighboring county. Under this plan, they are obtaining the stone at a cost of from $1.37 to $1.67 a ton which is said to be cheaper than farmers can crush their own stone. The use of limestone at this price is limited only by the supply, soil specialists say.

Many other counties in the state are using large quantities of limestone for soil improvement, but only those having the advantages of a state-owned crushed in localities where outcroppings of a good grade of stone are abundant have used as much during a short period of time as has been used in Grayson county, it is said.

HELPFUL WORDS

From a Maysville Citizen.
Is your back lame and painful? Does it ache especially after exertion? Is there a soreness in the kidney region? These symptoms suggest weak kidneys. If so there is danger in delay. Weak kidneys get weaker fast. Give your trouble prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. Your neighbors use and recommend them.

Read this Maysville testimony. Mrs. J. W. Ishmeal 225 East Fifth street, says: I had been a sufferer from kidney trouble for many years. My kidneys were in a weak condition and at times they acted too often. My back ached terribly which broke my rest at night. I had dizzy spells and could see flashes before my eyes and everything turned black before me. A friend told me about using Doan's Kidney Pills with benefit so I sent to Swift's drug store and got two boxes. After using them I got better and have felt like a different woman ever since. I can't recommend Doan's too highly. Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy — get Doan's Kidney Pills — the same that Mrs. Ishmeal had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. TWO CORBIN MEN HELD FOR MOLESTING DEPUTIES.

Two men, who registered as J. B. Sutton and W. H. Barker, both of Corbin, Ky., were taken to Covington Sunday night by C. W. Sprouse and Richard Eubanks, deputy United States Marshal of the Covington office, and lodged in jail on charges of obstructing justice.

It is charged that the two men have been interfering with the work of the deputy marshals stationed at the railroad shops in Corbin.

According to the marshals, who were sent to Corbin on Saturday to arrest the two men, Parker is a deputy sheriff there and recently arrested several deputy marshals who were going from Corbin to Livingston in an automobile truck. Parker charging at the time that the marshals had whisky in the truck. When the marshals were arraigned on the charge it was found to be false and they were dismissed. Sutton, it is charged, furnished the information that led to the arrest of the marshals.

EUROPE IS SPLIT BADLY OVER GER- MAN REPARATIONS

Crisis Like That Which Faced Europe
In 1914 Again Faces Countries as War Allies Are Unable To Agree.

London, Aug. 21. — The element of uncertainty now pervading Europe as a result of the inability of the allies to agree upon the German reparations problem has now reached the state where the situation is compared to the days preceding July, 1914, when the old world was facing decision of peace or war.

France's threatened isolated action against Germany, if carried out, would, according to widely accepted belief in England, provide the one disturbing factor needed to plunge the continent into hopeless ruin.

The Weekly Outlook expressed the view entertained in many quarters by saying:

"There is only one alternative to a European settlement through which debts and indemnities are canceled, armies reduced and the nations of the continent united in peace co-operation, and that alternative is war."

"European civilization will not and cannot survive more wars, at least not until we have worked two or three generations to repair the ravages of the last war."

Premier David Lloyd George's consistent refusal to compromise in the recent London conference thus forcing the situation to a head is considered one of the premier's boldest strokes.

It is predicted this decision will prove to have been worth risking the termination of the entente in order to avoid further British support of the French in coercion of Germany.

The decision also was based on the theory that if France intends to precipitate a continental crisis the sooner that policy is revealed frankly and France learns the folly of attempting to collect unprocurable reparations, the better it will be for all concerned.
